Application for Internships

The University of California, San Francisco Center on Deafness (UCCD) is a community-based, comprehensive outpatient mental health clinic providing a full range of mental health services for deaf, hard-of-hearing and deafened individuals and their families. Services include: individual therapy, couples/family therapy, crisis intervention, case management, psychological and neuropsychological testing, medication evaluation and monitoring, and group therapy. Services are provided at the clinic, at school sites, in the home and/or in the community. Deaf AIDS Support Services (DASS) provides specialized mental health and psychosocial support for individuals with hearing loss and HIV/AIDS. Deaf Drug Alcohol Recovery Services (DDARS) provides group treatment, individual treatment and case management.

Internships are available for those who are enrolled in B.A. programs and in M.A. level counseling, marriage family therapy, psychology, social work, program development and management and planning (MAP) programs. In addition, we offer pre- and post-doctoral internships. The internship experience is tailored to meet each trainee's professional and educational goals, including increased knowledge in areas of mental health, substance abuse and deafness and increased knowledge of community based mental health and substance abuse services.

A trainee may gain experience in conducting activities such as:

- providing case management, psychosocial and support advocacy for consumers
- conducting intake assessments
- providing mental health services with children, adolescents, and adults(individual therapy, couples/family therapy, case management, groups)
- providing school based mental health services
- collaborating with local agencies and programs
- assisting with specific projects,
